Combating Invasive Weed Species Webinar October 28th

Beef Cattle Research Council - Oct 5, 2020

Pastures can be impacted by annual, biennial and perennial weeds, and each region across Canada will have different weeds that are problematic. During the summer, cattle and feed are on the move, increasing the risk of bringing unwanted invasive species onto your farm. This webinar will cover tips for dealing with invasive weed control for different regions across Canada. Register for our upcoming webinar to hear from three subject matter experts as they provide information from regions across the country and answer your questions about combating invasive weed species.

Canadian Roundtable for Sustainable Beef - Oct 13, 2020

Join us to provide your feedback as goals are developed On September 16, 2020, the Canadian Beef Advisors released the first series of long-term Canadian beef industry goals looking towards 2030. These first goals focused on GHGs and carbon sequestration; Animal Health and Welfare; and Land Use and Biodiversity. The Canadian Roundtable for Sustainable Beef (CRSB) is hosting a second series of webinars this fall as we continue to develop robust, action-oriented goals for our industry. These will focus on topics including Water; People Health and Safety; and Beef Quality and Food Safety.

The Cattle Cycle: Global Impacts and Domestic Indicators

Canfax Research Services - Oct 13, 2020

A CRS Fact Sheet sponsored by Merck Animal Health A cycle implies a series of events, regularly repeated in the same order. Between the double dip recession in 1980 and today, irregular activity within the cattle cycle has led some to call the concept into question. The cattle cycle here describes the repeatable series of consolidation, expansion, peak and liquidation in the Canadian cattle herd. The traditional assumption has been that over a period of 7-13 years, this cattle cycle repeats – influenced by price, production and profit – recognizing that other variables such as weather, major economic shifts, equity positions and interest rates may delay or accelerate the cycle.
